The Black Book of Colors, by Menena Cottin (E COT)

Reviewed by Sihaam Mohamad (5th grade)

Do you know someone who is blind? Here is a book that you can read together! It's a story about colors. Each color is described by a child who can see for a friend who cannot see. The book has Braille and print. Do you know what Braille is? It is textured bumps that you feel with your fingers and each letter has a specific pattern. A child who can see can learn Braille and a person who cannot see can learn about colors. There are no color pictures but there are still pictures! This is a really good book that you should try out!

Super Fairies: Violet the Velvet Rabbit by Janey Louise Jones (FIC JON)

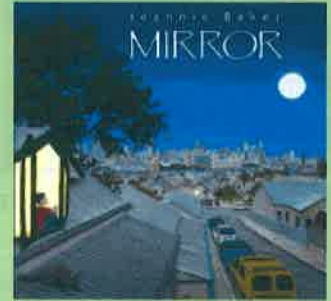

Reviewed by Moyinoluwa Davies (4th grade)

In this book there are four fairies with different super powers. What do you the fairies are going to do with these super powers? These heroic books will keep you flipping pages at night. I highly recommend this book!

We read to know we are not alone.

The Storyteller by Evan Turk

Reviewed by Hailie Herzog (4th grade)

When the Sahara desert wants to destroy a village, a boy starts telling a story in order to save the village. The Sahara likes the story so much that it's willing to wait another day to hear the story. Read the book and find out how many days the village has left! The artwork will hook you so much that you will not want to stop reading the book. The abstract pictures invite you to imagine the story in new ways. I recommend this book for both younger and older readers!

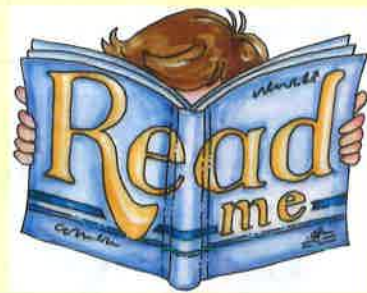

Buzz Beaker and the Cool Caps by Cari Meister

Reviewed by Dharneesh Sutharsan (1st grade)

Buzz Beaker is a clever kid who invents cool things. In this book Buzz is very hot because the air conditioning is not working. Buzz had an idea to fix the problem. What do you think Buzz builds? I highly recommend this series!
